SECURITY TO POLICY HOLDERS. THIS old and responsible Company insures against loss or damage by Fire, almost every description of property, and offers to Merchants and others desiring insurance, the security of an actual Capital of $6,298,800, for the whole of which, and for any liabilities beyond, the Shareholders are INDIVIDUALLY RESPONSIBLE, even to the extent of their entire fortunes. The Shareholders number about one thousand, and as a large portion of these are persons of great wealth, the most ample provisions exist for meeting every possible claim against the Company.

SUBJECT TO THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES. In appointing an Agent for the United States, the Company has empowered him "to appear to and accept any action or legal proceedings instituted against or by said Company, in the same manner as if the Company were a Corporation or Company established by the laws of the United States, or any of the several States."

PROVISION FOR PAYMENT OF LOSSES IN THE UNITED STATES. A SPECIAL PERMANENT FUND HAS BEEN PLACED AT THE DISPOSAL OF THE AGENT AT PHILADELPHIA, TO ENABLE BIM TO ADJUST AND PROMPTLY PAY ALL Losses, WITHOUT REFERENCE TO LONDON.

LIBERAL TO THE INSURED. The uniform course of the Company has always been a liberal one towards Policy Holders. No just claim has ever been disputed, and prompt payment of losses is a standing rule. During the past year, losses exceeding $525,000 were paid. Losses paid as soon as the amount is ascertained.

COMPANY, ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA. CAPITAL OVER 350,000 DOLLARS,

AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING. The Charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium a cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the inured saves nearly one-half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of the CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE. This Company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 13th day of March, 1854, since which time over seven thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over seventy thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having increased our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospeets of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety not surpassed by any Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may b letermined by three disinterested arbitrators of the

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HUMBOLT'S PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE .-Frederick the Great, King of Prussia, great as a general and a statesman, undertook also to be great in literature, and patronised Voltaire. The man of letters flattered the King to his face, but lampooned him behind his back. Taking home some of Frederick's manuscripts to criticise and correct, he remarked to a friend that he was taking home some of His Majesty's dirty linen to wash .-The expression reaching the monarch's ears, the daring wit received personal chastise-Woman's Home Book of Health, a work for ment, and was sent out of the kingdom-at least, so the story goes. Alexander Von Humboldt lived nearly twenty years before either of these men passed from the earth, and he became a philosopher, with no slight tinge of the sentiments of Voltaire: while William, the late acting King of Prussia, also thought to be a literary monarch by drawing literary men around him. Von Humboldt kept his civility while he lived, but it seems left a correspondence behind him when he died, in which he amply revenges himself by the freedom of his remarks, especially upon kings and the mighty generally. For ninety years he wore a mask.

The most inexplicable thing thus far, apparently, of Humboldt's whole career, has but just come to light. He, the politest and kindest hearted apparently of men, especially to kings and princes, writes the most spiteful things about them, and leaves directions to publish it all after his death. His correspondence with his friend. Vernhagen Von Ense, gives in the most unreserved manner, not only his own opinion in regard to religion, and to every one he came in contact with, but even beyond this, the opinions of such personages as the King of Prussis and others, in regard to his Ministers. and Courtiers, and Princes, and in regard to foreign monarchs and men of all grades. These letters, with all sorts of explanatory notes, are thrown at once upon the world in the life-time of the men who are most ridiculed and even slandered. Those supposed to be Humboldt's warmest personal friends, the King at whose table he almost daily sat, are treated in this correspondence with a degree not only of contempt but of exposure, such as he never ventured upon during his life. It seems difficult to believe that he would have done so unworthy an act, as voluntarily to cause to be published the most A "The Pillar of Fire," and "Prince of the House of David," for sale at FRENCH'S Book shameful details of their private lives after his death, from cowardice. It is true, that after all parties and their friends are dead and forgotten, the truth of tion of the private lives and characters of the most important public men. Had Humpublished, the case would have been in letting the world know that his friend, the King of Prussia, always spoke of his Privy Counsellor, Von Raumer, as "jackass," Nor was it right upon any principle of publie or private morals, to give vent to his own opinions of men and characters, in the way that has here been done. He had of course a perfect right to find fault with and denounce the public acts and character of Louis Napoleon, as he has here done. But it would be difficult to acquit him of acting meanly if he concealed his opinion during life to express it after his own death. Of Chevalier Bunsen he speaks with the utmost contempt, as a sort of hypocrite, really because he did not understand the man or his principles; and, in fact, his judgements are so much the reverse of those a tale of youth's temptations, by Percey B. St. of other men, and so bitter against all those most honored, and in regard to the very points on which they are esteemed, that it is only to be accounted for on the supposition that he (as he hints) loved to be "severe against the mighty." Yet this severity was apparently behind their backs, and certainly is only vented after his decease. None were so courteous to princes, and none more courted by them of the whole race of philosophers, than this same Baron Von Humboldt. That he always was a sincere friend to liberty and to liberal opinions in politics, none that knew him will doubt, and so, too, was he always great in all questions of natural science. But in other matters, his brother William will ever hold a far higher and more permanent rank. He would never have run any risk of such letters being published, so as to torment living friends. Nor can there be any doubt but that Alexander Von Humboldt must have materially changed since he published the life and remains of his brother, or he must have forgotten much that these letters contained, or else he was at ninety and upwards in his dotage.
